

I'm concerned about LPFM services receiving higher priority over FM translator services such as K-LOVE. I'm a frequent listener and a financial supporter of K-LOVE radio on 105.5 FM, 89.1 FM, and 100.9 FM in the Phoenix Area. The translator provides commercial free Christian music and news in the Phoenix area that can't be found in the same quality on any other station.

I have many friends who also listen frequently to K-LOVE radio. If it were to be replaced by LPFM services with other programming there is a segment of the community who would not be served. Quality family programming and Christian music of this quality cannot be had from any other source. Local Christian stations are good, but can't match the quality of programming or services offered by a national broadcaster such as K-LOVE who attracts the best talent and artists of interest to the Christian community.

K-LOVE serves the community not only because it provides positive news, encouraging music, and great talent, but also because it uses it's national reach to promote programs of giving and caring that directly affect the communities we live in. For example, K-LOVE spotlights local programs that help to feed the hungry and homeless around the holiday season. They help those programs to attract a wide audience of folks who care to support programs of this like that are organized on a national level but operate in the local communities where K-LOVE translators are listened to.

The best demonstration of the need for K-LOVE is the local support of listeners like myself. If this services wasn't serving the best interest of the community it would never be able to raise the support necessary to continue broadcasting in so many regions of our country.

Please don't take away my K-LOVE.

Sincerely,

Jon P. Moorhead
